I came to the Human Services sector in the mid 1970’s out of my conviction to improve the quality of life for vulnerable people. Now, after a long and rewarding career with Volunteers of America I am resolved to move on and retire as President/CEO. I am still very much committed to reaching out and helping where at all possible and I believe that this desire and ambition is noble and as worthy now as it has always been. The work is challenging to say the least and at times can seem downright impossible to achieve good outcomes. However, it is no less virtuous and even in its darkest moments, somehow, incredibly inspiring.

Human service is increasingly complex, daunting and mysterious. And thus, there lies the fascinating and energizing experience of our trade. The intrinsic rewards are both amazing and exactly what the purpose-driven individual seeks. The financial benefit is more often disappointing but at the end of most days you are soulfully satisfied. One is so often inspired by the will and human nature that can conquer hardship.

As an addictions and mental health treatment provider we see the frustration, the damage and injustice inherent in society. But also the inspiration of both those that help and those that overcome hardship and pain. There is truly something morally fundamental in accepting responsibility to fight for another person’s life to be better. And thereby come to believe that you are making a difference in the cosmic greater good.

I believe life everywhere is hard, complicated and stubbornly resistant to change. And although you see suffering up close, at the end of the day the cause is just, honest and true. Your purpose is fulfilled and just maybe you’ve created something sustainable and everlasting.

Sincerely,

Thomas Bierbaum
CEO and President

Justice Mental Health Collaborative Program (JMHCP) is a collaborative effort between the Essex County Sheriff’s Department and Volunteers of America Massachusetts. This program is designed to divert individuals diagnosed with mental health and substance abuse co-occurring disorders from incarceration to comprehensive and individualized treatment.

Senior Assisted Living communities Nashoba Park, Concord Park, and Forestdale Park offer both independent living and personalized assisted living, featuring memory care.
We are clients. We are clinicians, case workers, and other professionals. We are organizational leaders and Board Directors. We are community partners. We are volunteers, supporters, and friends. We are neighbors. We are your neighbor.

We come together to serve those most in need. In difficult times we rally behind our clients and make our own headwinds collaborating across all channels in the community. Our success is anchored the huge hearts of our professionally skilled staff, leadership that intersects faith, vision, and effective governance, and compassionate friends and generous donors who understand why we matter.

We are an indelible mark in Massachusetts’ history and part of its bright future. Our faces – the many people who make up Volunteers of America - are woven across the very best we give to each other towards a greater purpose. Thank you for joining with us.

Your support is making a difference…

“I couldn’t do any of this without Hello House. I know the numbers. Most addicts relapse. But now I have the tools and a network.”
– Tim, Former Client

“I come to work every day knowing I’m on the side of good to change lives where once there was pain and chaos.”
– Mark, Staff

“Substance Abuse Disorder is the major public health crisis of our era. People caught up (with this) need intensive, prolonged and holistic assistance as they learn to live productive lives. Volunteers of America of Massachusetts actively responds to their needs, develops admirable programs, and provides best practices care. VOA programs fill a vital need in our communities. We’re grateful for their dedication.”
– Tom Hirschfeld, a Cummings Foundation Site Visitor
Recovery is for life.

Substance abuse treatment is not played out over nine innings. There are no time outs with a mental health disorder. There will be set backs, if not many. Before someone with substance abuse and mental health disorders can return home or begin a journey towards a new home there must first be the presence of real change. Addiction, mental health disorders, and the many problems that are born from these disorders – chronic unemployment, family separation, and homelessness – turn lives into complicated knots. Recovery is to repair.

Our work is to help untangle these knots and smooth out the threads so it’s possible to return to family, work, to the rest of our lives. VOA walks the talk about truth – we share our client’s pain and heartbreak. We help clients find their motivation. The knot loosens. Air gets inside. Light breaks through. We meet each client where they are at and begin to guide them through the stages of change. We know that each client is unique and therefore each person has his or her own recovery plan - a plan defined by goals, a map to achieve those goals, and the support of staff and peers to help every day. Volunteers of America provide harm-reduction and trauma-informed care that emphasizes personal growth, coping, and decision-making skills. There is no easy road. We are all long distance runners. Recovery is for life.

In Their Words

“Before coming to the Hello House I was in several programs including five years on Boston streets, alleys, hallways, shelters, and vacant buildings...but since coming to Volunteers of America I have gained a keen awareness of self and better love and respect... I wouldn’t trade this for anything....”

“I started as a social drinker in my teens and enjoyed the feeling of euphoria... (I thought) it was a harmless social activity.....I always worked and supported my family......then I was injured and knew opioids was not sustainable so I self-medicated with vodka...up to ½ gallon a day until vomiting blood.... I then found a safety net – Volunteers of America, which is a huge part of my recovery.....I am now four months sober....”
"We grew up poor, single mother household...my mother god bless her was a good mother and SHE DIED BEFORE HER TIME...I was already dealing drug and paid for her funeral, she would have been mad if she knew...I was 19 years old and my daughter was still in the womb...before she was born I got sentenced to two years for my first of a series of drug offenses....after released I was back to dealing....I first did ecstasy and felt like bionic man....in my mid-20's I then got into cocaine....after my second daughter was born I developed a gambling addiction...LOST RENT MONEY....it was 2007 and I left my daughter with younger brother to see my friend who was detoxing from heroin...as I was walking a cop was following me. I began running. I had fifteen rocks of crack in my pockets so I ran until I could swallow them all....on the ground I was cuffed....I was devastated not being able to tell my baby girl good bye again....I let her down....SENTENCED TO THREE YEARS...released and working...met love of my life and had third daughter....new start....then got hooked on Percocet and led me to heroin.3 overdoses in 4 months....was working and driving the company truck and drinking...failed breathalyzer....that sentence was the best thing that ever happened to me....WITHDRAWALS WERE HORRIFYING could not eat move sleep for 3 weeks and then depression sets in....but then a month later I started to get a "lil clearer....And then I got into the Hello House...attended meetings and participating in groups....by 6 months more clear and by 8 months I was feeling normal again. Here I am, 10 months later FEELING GOOD AND HAPPY. The journey is far from over because recovery is a life-long process. God bless you all and keep your head up."

"VOA Massachusetts is an inspiration because of its dedication to the mission of compassion. Whether it's through programs for youth, veterans or seniors, this is an organization that recognizes the person before the problem, and the human, rather than the label. I'm honored to continue to serve as a member of this board for nearly a decade."

– Ashwini Nadkarni, M.D.

"My time with VOA of Massachusetts has been transformative. Having worked for two programs and witnessed the integration of community and connection I feel grateful to be a part of a compassion centered organization that values mental and emotional wellness."
